Suppress, Finesse, Ecstatic

Suppress (दमन करना) (Verb) (suh-PRES) (Neutral/Negative Tone)

- Meaning of word (English): To restrain, hold back, or put an end to something forcefully.
- Meaning of word (Hindi): किसी चीज़ को नियंत्रित करना, दबाना या समाप्त करना।
- Origin Flowchart & Etymology:
 - Latin: supprimere → "to press down" → Old French: supprimer → "to abolish" → English: Suppress (15th century)
- Synonym + Antonym:
 - Synonyms: Restrain, Quash, Stifle, Subdue
 - Antonyms: Encourage, Release, Permit
- Connotation: Often associated with forceful control, censorship, or restraint.

- Use in Non-Fiction (300 words max.):

Governments throughout history have suppressed dissent to maintain control. Whether through censorship, military action, or legal barriers, suppression is a tool used to limit opposition. For example, during the Cold War, many regimes suppressed free speech to prevent rebellion. However, suppression isn't always negative. A leader may suppress panic during a crisis to maintain order. In psychology, individuals sometimes suppress traumatic memories to protect themselves.

- Correct and Incorrect Usage (English + Hindi Equivalent):

- ✓ Correct: The government suppressed the protest to avoid further violence. (सरकार ने हिंसा रोकने के लिए विरोध को दबा दिया।)

- Bonus Content:
 - The Art of Finesse in Everyday Life
 - Finesse is the silent force behind seamless interactions, whether in conversations, negotiations, or problem-solving. It's the subtle ability to maneuver through challenges with grace, ensuring outcomes feel effortless. A skilled negotiator finesse deals without conflict, just as an artist finesse brushstrokes to bring a masterpiece to life. Even in sports, finesse separates the great from the good—precision in movement, calculated risks, and perfect timing. It isn't about deception but about refinement—knowing when to act, when to wait, and when to adjust. True finesse lies in mastering subtlety, making difficult tasks appear simple to the outside world.

Ecstatic (उत्साही) (Adjective) (ek-STAT-ik) (Strong Positive Tone)
