1. Spurn (ठुकराना) (Verb) (spurn) (Dismissive & Rejecting)

- Meaning (English): To reject with disdain or contempt.
- Meaning (Hindi): तिरस्कार या अवमानना से ठुकराना।
- Origin Flowchart & Etymology:
 - Old English spurnan → “to kick away” → figuratively “reject with contempt.”

- Use in Non-Fiction (100 words):

In professional life, one may encounter situations where offers need to be evaluated carefully. Not every opportunity deserves acceptance; some must be spurned, especially if they compromise ethics or values. For instance, an employee might spurn a high-paying job that requires unethical practices. Spurning is not always about arrogance but about clarity of judgment. It shows strength of character, a refusal to succumb to temptations that may derail long-term goals. Such rejections, though difficult, often shape the integrity and reputation of individuals or organizations. Thus, to spurn is sometimes the wiser path forward.

The phrase “in dire straits” is commonly used to describe severe conditions requiring urgent solutions. Unlike temporary setbacks, straits often demand resilience and strategic thinking to overcome.
